The University and its employees are jointly responsible for compliance with and enforcement of the legislation, standards, and programs. The University and its employees will take all appropriate measures to prevent accidents, occupational illnesses and injuries.

All employees are responsible for complying with the legislation, standards and programs, and with the instructions of their supervisors.

All employees are responsible for working safely, and for reporting all unsafe and unhealthy conditions to their immediate supervisors, in the interest of their own health and safety and that of other employees, students and visitors. All employees will be held individually accountable for fulfilling their responsibilities.

Accountability with respect to health and safety will be evaluated by measuring job performance against established health and safety standards.

Appropriate action will be taken against any employee who fails to meet his or her obligations concerning health and safety.

Students, though not covered by the Occupational Health & Safety Act or its regulations, are required to adhere to all University policies and procedures relating to health and safety.

Students who fail to meet their responsibilities with respect to health and safety may face sanctions under the Code of Student Behaviour and Disciplinary Procedures.

In addition, all individuals who are not employees of the University, but who perform duties for the University, with or without remuneration, are required to adhere to all applicable legislation and standards, and to all University policies and procedures relating to health and safety.

A report summarizing health and safety activities at the University will be submitted to the Board annually.
