VOLUNTARY INDIGENOUS SELF-IDENTIFICATION

What is self-identification? Indigenous students provide specific information about themselves in a voluntary and confidential online survey conducted and kept secure by Lakehead University. The University's Offices of Indigenous Initiatives and Institutional Planning and Analysis use this data for reporting purposes, to support Indigenous specific programming and to plan future initiatives.

By self-identifying, Indigenous students can:

- Strengthen the Indigenous presence and influence at Lakehead University
- Connect with the growing Indigenous student community on campus
- Assist Indigenous departments to further positive changes to services and supports
- Receive communications about Indigenous specific opportunities such as scholarships, bursaries, events and career opportunities

If you choose, you can also add your name and email address to the confidential Indigenous Student Services Centre (ISSC) email membership list. This will ensure you receive information about the following: Academic workshops, bursaries and scholarships, career and employment opportunities, on and off campus events and cultural events information

OGIMAAWIN INDIGENOUS EDUCATION COUNCIL

The Ogimaawin Indigenous Education Council (O-IEC) at Lakehead University was founded on the original Native Advisory Committee and constituted into its present form in response to the Ontario Ministry of Education and Training - Aboriginal Education and Training Strategy (AETS) in the early 1990s. AETS is an initiative to increase access for Indigenous students in Ontario's universities and colleges. O-IEC membership consists of organizations from the surrounding Indigenous community that sit in an advisory capacity to the President's Office. O-IEC has representation on the Lakehead University Board of Governors and Senate.

Indigenous Cultural Traditions Club (ICTC) formerly LUNSA

The Indigenous Cultural Traditions Club (ICTC) is committed to ensuring the Indigenous (First Nations, Métis and Inuit) students' university experience is fulfilling and enjoyable. ICTC student voices are recognized throughout the Lakehead University community. ICTC is responsible for organizing the annual Powwow.
