Course Details

Anthropology 3234 - Issues in Consulting Archaeology
Start Term: 2014-15
End Term: No Specified End Date

Course Details
Code Anthropology 3234
Title Issues in Consulting Archaeology
Description Most archaeological research in North America is currently conducted as part of environmental impact assessment of proposed development projects. These consulting archaeologists work in a competitive bidding environment, and focus on locating and evaluating sites at risk of disturbance. This new reality raises challenges for those trained in academic archaeology, but whose careers will be in consulting. The development of archaeological consultation is reviewed through case studies, which introduce some of the issues associated with doing archaeology within a business framework.
